READY FOR THE OCCASION

Mary Had Looked Ahead and Was There With Help for Her "John Dear."

A New York business man tells this story on himself:

In the "brave days when he was twenty-one" his income was not only limited, but his prospects were discouraging. At that time he became engaged to a winsome lassie whose affections could not be doubted, but whose financial prospects were as shadowy as his own.

One evening when his sweetheart and himself were strolling about the outskirts of the city he was particularly despondent and disheartened.

"Mary," he said, "I don't see how we are ever going to get married. There doesn't seem to be any chance for us at all. Why, all I've got in the world is a dollar and a quarter. I could not even pay the parson for marrying us."

"John, dear," said Mary, snuggling a little closer, "if that's all that's bothering you, you don't need to worry. I've a dollar here that I swiped out of grandmother's pocket-book when she wasn't looking, and you can have that so as to give the parson two dollars."

They were married then and there.

UNFORTUNATE MICE

"Young Wife—Oh, Fred! the mice have eaten all that cake I made."

Husband—Never mind. What's the use of grieving over a few little mice?

LOVE ADDS TO BEAUTY.

"Heaven gives us our faces," the old saw tells us, "but we make our own expressions." And mainly because love confers the greatest charm of expression, it may be truly said to beautify.

Edwin and Angelina not only dream one another handsomer and more lovely as their courtship progresses, but they actually become so. The dullest eyes are beautiful when love looks out of them. Nature's most carelessly cut mouth takes on delicious curves when lips murmur love language, and in a single day Master Cupid will do more to glorify pallid cheeks and faded tresses than a Bond street beauty doctor could do in six months.

Happiness is universally acclaimed the great beautifier. No real happiness ever enters the human heart save through the gate of love. Who can deny the little archer's double claim to being the great beautifier?—Forget-Me-Not.

POTENTIAL CONTACT MINES.

Three submarine contact mines, each containing a charge of 138 pounds of gun cotton, were discharged by electricity in San Diego bay between Fort Rosecrans and the naval coaling station. The mines were exploded automatically. A barge was towed over them and struck a submerged buoy so contrived as to complete the electric circuit the instant the barge touched it. Although the charge was only one-sixth of the one that would be employed in war time, the explosions were of sufficient force to wreck almost anything that floats.

SNAKE TOO MUCH FOR HERON.

A heron's attack on a snake was witnessed near Bettws-y-Coed, Wales, recently. The snake was crossing the Llugwy river when a heron swooped down and picked it up and flew away with it. The snake, however, wound itself round the heron's neck so tightly that the bird was forced to seek the refuge of a high fir tree near the Swallow Falls. After a short struggle the heron was forced to relax its hold of the snake, which fell to the ground.

Preparing for the Trip

"It is almost time for me to be going," said Mrs. Binxley's caller, "for George will be waiting for me and mademoiselle will be there to give us our French lesson."

"I didn't know you were studying French," remarked Mrs. Binxley.

"Yes, we've been taking lessons for the last month. We sail July 1, you know."

"I should hardly think two months of French would benefit you perceptibly," observed Mrs. Binxley.

"But we are getting on beautifully," returned her friend. "Mademoiselle is the dearest thing! How she does work with us! She will carry a chair out of the room, asking, in French of course, 'What am I doing now?' And we answer her, 'you take out the chair.' Then she will bring it back, inquiring, 'What am I doing now?' and so on. George says she has carried out and brought back everything in the room except the piano. It's a lovely way to learn a language, for we are not bothered with books."

"You are not going to engage in the business of moving furniture while you are abroad, are you?" asked Mrs. Binxley.

"Of course not, but think of all the words we are adding to our French vocabulary."

"If you are anxious to study French in that way, it seems to me it would be practical to have your teacher represent a dressmaker who has spoiled a garment for you and learn to express in a few emphatic and incisive words your intention to throw the dress back on her hands unless suitable alterations are made."

"But French dressmakers—modistes I suppose I should call them—never make misfits," suggested the caller.

"Don't they?" exclaimed Mrs. Binxley. "If you could see a princess gown that I bought in Paris, with a back seam that started on the right path, but was lured to one side, you would think French modistes do make misfits."

"Then I shall ask mademoiselle what to say when one wants changes made in a dress," said the caller. "My dear, if you had studied the language before you sailed you would have saved yourself both money and vexation."

"We had three months of French before we went over," replied Mrs. Binxley. "My husband had studied Latin in his youth, which he said was a great help to him in speaking French, and he was quite proud of his ability in that line—before he went to France. He hasn't mentioned it since."

"Didn't he know how to make use of his knowledge?"

"He had a perfect genius for saying the wrong thing," declared Mrs. Binxley. "He got us into trouble more than once. One night when we were traveling through the south of France Mr. Binxley went to the ticket office to have our tickets vised when the train stopped at Narbonne, I believe it was. I never did learn what he said, but several of the officials came to the window of our compartment as angry as so many hornets and all talking at once. I thought of the way the French people acted during their revolution and my blood ran cold."

"How did it end?" asked the caller.

"There was a little American woman asleep in one corner of our compartment who, awakened by the noise, spoke French so rapidly for a few minutes that she must have made even those natives dizzy. She seemed to have explained whatever it was and they slunk away without another word. I asked her what it was all about, but she was grumpy and sleepy and not inclined to conversation."

"Didn't you ask your husband what he had said to make those men so angry?"

"Yes, but he did not seem to know. He evidently had used the wrong words."

"I will have mademoiselle arrange a hypothetical argument with railway officials," remarked the caller, thoughtfully.

"I would," advised Mrs. Binxley, "and be sure to have her explain the difference between a 'jupe' and a 'jupon,' for you will need the words in shopping."

"This conversation reminds me of a dream I had last night," said the caller. "I thought I was in Paris and that mademoiselle, dressed as a tight-rope walker, was tripping gayly over a wire that reached from the Louvre to the Place de la Concorde. When she caught sight of me she swung by one toe, calling out: 'What am I doing now?'"

"Thousands of people seemed to be waiting for my answer. As I did not know the French word for swinging and had forgotten the French word for toe, I woke in great trepidation."

"It gets on one's nerves dreadfully to study a foreign language."

Chickens a La Mode.

Freddie was visiting relatives in Canada and his mother constantly besought him to be on his good behavior and to avoid saying anything that might give offense, but one day when his aunt asked him at luncheon if he would have some chicken he could not help showing his surprise.

"Why, what's the matter, Freddie?" inquired the aunt; "don't you like curried chicken?"

"Well, aunt, I can't really say," was the reply. You see, down in the states we don't curry our chickens—we pick 'em.—Delineator.

MODEL FARM ON CAPE COD

Town of Sandwich Conducts One for the Benefit of the School Children.

The little town of Sandwich, down on the ankle of Cape Cod, is teaching its boys and girls how a community which numbers some 1,500 souls conducts a model farm for the benefit of its public school children. But the children are not the only ones who take advantage of the opportunity to get some real practical farm schooling right in town, says the Spokane Spokesman-Review. Men from all parts of Barnstable county, in which Sandwich is located, go to the farm school when there is room for them.

Two years ago the town came into possession by will of a farm of about 160 acres, a large village residence, a small greenhouse and nearly $25,000 in cash. The conditions of the bequest were that the village should use the entire property for the agricultural and industrial benefit of the region.

After consulting with the Massachusetts Agricultural college, the trustees of the estate decided to turn the property into a model farm to teach practical agriculture. Albert W. Doolittle of Hackensack, N. J., was selected to take charge of the project, being a practical farmer who had taken a college agricultural course and specialized in horticulture, pomology and poultry raising.

Small fruits and vegetables are grown on the village farm at Sandwich and in addition a model poultry raising plant has been installed. The most approved methods are followed, but nothing is done which would be beyond the means of anyone who desires to take up a similar work.

Boys from the schools of Sandwich may go to Mr. Doolittle for instruction in planting, pruning, spraying and caring for fruits, the growing of vegetables, the building of poultry houses, operation of incubators and brooding and raising of chickens.

CROWN FOR QUEEN MOTHER

Its Style One of the Many Things That King George Is Expected to Settle.

One of the many matters of detail that King George will have to settle will be the style of the crown to be worn by the queen mother. The crown she used at the coronation was broken up almost immediately after the ceremony, for the very simple reason that the bulk of the diamonds of which it was composed were only hired for that purpose. The queen's crown, preserved with the regalia and made for Mary of Modena, is not at all likely to be taken into use, and the small diamond crown which Queen Victoria had made at her own expense was her private property. By her will she devised it as an heirloom to belong to the queen consort for the time being.

ANIMALS FOND OF PEANUTS.

"I am perfectly used," remarked a visitor to the Central park zoo, "to seeing monkeys and elephants eat peanuts. And I do not think it strange that the toucans relish them, for they are very much like a parrot. But when it comes down to polar bears, buffaloes, wild dogs and the rhinoceros liking peanuts it disturbs my ideas of wild animals." Peanuts, however, seem to furnish the finest of dainties to even the "wildest" animals in the zoo. The deer, antelope, brown bears, ducks, golden pheasants and all the animals there, except perhaps the lions, tigers and eagles, eat peanuts. The peanut seems to have charms to soothe the savage breast.—New York Tribune.

FATHER DIDN'T COUNT.

He had proposed and she had accepted.

"Now," he said, "I presume it is up to me to see your father?"

"Oh, no," she replied. "See mother."

NUMBER OF CREMATIONS.

Since 1878 there have been 19,121 cremations in Germany. In the United States in the last year alone there were 34,500.

$10,700 FOR A CONCERT.

It was in her native country, Australia, that Mme. Melba received the largest sum ever paid to a singer for a single concert, viz., $10,700.
